The Center for Ethics, Religion and Public Health Collaborative, and the Public Health Ethics Club

Public Health, Religion, and Ethics Lecture Series

“Public Health, Religion, and Ethics: Reflections of a Former President and the Founder of the Carter Center”

President Jimmy Carter
39th President of the United States and Founder of the Carter Center

Tuesday, November 13, 2012
2:30 p.m.
Winship Ballroom/Dobbs University Center
Emory University

This is the first in a series of lectures on Public Health, Religion, and Ethics. The series will explore a new ethics for public health and religion, raising questions about the principles guiding individuals and institutions and the on-the-ground reality of cooperation and contention between faith-based organizations and the public health sector.